Murray, George Washington, was born September 22, 1853, of slave parents, near Rembert, Sumter County, S. C.; emancipation found him a lad of 11 summers; bereft of both parents, thrown upon the rugged shores of early emancipation, without a friend upon whom to rely for either aid or advice, he entered upon the fierce combat then in progress in an impoverished section for the indispensable bread of life; among the waifs of his neighborhood in 1866 he picked up his alphabet and acquired an imperfect and crude pronunciation of monosyllable; during the next five years he so industriously applied himself in efforts to improve his meager stock of knowledge that in January, 1871, he entered, while in session, for the first time, a day school, but as teacher, not scholar; he taught until the fall of 1874, when he successfully passed a competitive examination and obtained a scholarship as subfreshman in the reconstructed University of South Carolina; having passed through his alma mater to his junior year, the accession to power of an administration unfriendly to the coeducation of the races (1876) forced him without her doors; he reentered the public schools of his county as teacher, and was successfully employed until February, 1890; although opposed by one of the wealthiest and most popular Democrats in the State, he was returned by the managers of elections, nearly all of whom were Democrats, by about 1,000 majority, notwithstanding twelve of his strongest polls were not opened; having run the gauntlet of the various boards of managers and canvassers, elected as a Republican to the Fifty-third Congress; renominated for the Fifty-fourth Congress by the Republicans; the certificate of election was given to his opponent, William Elliott, but as the result of a contest the seat was awarded to Mr. Murray June 4, 1896.
